Key Measures of New Deal Placed Before High Court

AAA and TVA Laws Taken Under Advisement by U. S. Supreme Justices

EARLY AAA VERDICT

Court Sustains Michigan State Tax Up to $250 on Chain Stores

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The supreme court agreed Monday to measure the New Deal's farm and Tennessee valley programs by the yardstick of the constitution which already has ruled out NRA.

In docketing a potentially historic term the tribunal received the unprecedented action of a state attacking a Roosevelt administration law, Georgia, whose Gov. Eugene Talmadge is a Roosevelt foe, asked permission to challenge constitutionality of the Bankhead cotton control act. Chief Justice Hughes said the court would consider Georgia's request. The tribunal agreed last spring to review a Texas case involving the Bankhead cotton ginning tax.

Of more immediate importance to the administration was the high court's agreement to pass on the constitutionality of the AAA's processing block should the Supreme Court rule against it. President Roosevelt has indicated congress may be asked to levy new taxes to supply the $500,000,000 estimated necessary to fulfill existing benefit payment contracts.

Involved in the TVA case is governmental sale of surplus power—a key stone of the New Deal's policy of setting up a government standard for measuring private power costs.

Store Tax Upheld
The validity of the Michigan chain store tax in effect was upheld. At the request of all parties to the controversy, the court dismissed an appeal by the C. F. Smith Company and 20 other corporations and 15 individuals challenging the tax.

The Michigan Supreme Court had sustained the graduated annual license tax on chain stores running from $10 for each store in excess of one, when not more than three are operated under the same ownership or control, to $250 for each store in excess of 25.

May Advance AAA Case

Thief Gets Away With Angry Bees

But Tulsa Police Are Looking for Badly-Stung Apiary Raider

TULSA, Okla.—(AP)—Somewhere around Tulsa Monday was a thief who had 10,000 "tough cookies" in his possession. J. W. Brand, apiarist, reported to police that someone had stolen two hives of bees from him. "Just look for somebody that's been stung," Brand told police. "Those bees are tough cookies. They've been eating honey-suckle nectar all summer and that has the same effect on bees as fresh raw meat does on a bulldog."

Arkadelphia Team to Play Bobcats at 7:45 Tuesday

Luckless Badgers Off to Bad Season But Will Give Locals a Fight

HOPE HAS BIG EDGE

Tuesday Night's Game Is Benefit for Hope Band-boys' Uniform Fund

The Hope High School football team seems as a heavy favorite to win over the Arkadelphia High School Badgers when the two teams meet here Tuesday night. The dope points to a Bobcat victory by several touchdowns.

Coach Hammons plans to make the game interesting, and will send his reserves into action if the regular team is able to run up a safe margin.

Several of the first-string squad are nursing injuries received in the El Dorado game last Friday, which is a further reason to rely on reserve players.

The Arkadelphia squad has an unimpressive record this season. The team is light and inexperienced. According to weights released Tuesday by Coach George Emory, the heaviest man on the team weighs only 155 pounds. The is Franklin, right tackle. The Arkadelphia backfield averages slightly more than 134 pounds, weights given out by the Arkadelphia coach, show.

Tickets are on sale at Garner's Pressing parlor. The auxiliary of the Hope Boys band is sponsoring the game and half the proceeds, after expenses are subtracted, will go to the band uniform fund.

The game starts at 7:45 p. m. The Bobcats will be playing their fifth game of the season, having won two and lost two.

Craft Unions at Stake in A. F. of L.

Alternative Is Organization of Each Industry in One Big Union

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—(AP)—After a year of bitter factional strife, two rival groups of American Federation of Labor building trades unions shook hands and made peace Monday night. They agreed to refer their issues to a board of three members from each side, with a neutral chairman. This board is to work out a plan for reorganization of the federation's Building Trades Department.

Craft unionists won the first round in the battle over how workers in mass production industries should be organized. The convention's resolutions committee, eight to seven, recommended that the convention reaffirm its present policy that mass production workers should be organized into industrial unions with due protection of the jurisdictional rights of already-established craft unions.

The minority will submit a report to the convention calling for adoption of the following policy recommended in a resolution submitted by about 50 federal unions:

That the federation "promote the organization of industrial, national and international unions in the mass production industries, with jurisdiction over all workers employed in their respective industries, irrespective of craft or trade."

The scrap is over whether one big union should be formed in each big industry, or whether the machinists' union, for instance, should organize all the machine shop workers in all industries.

Both the majority and the minority reports will be carried to the convention floor Wednesday.

OTTAWA, Canada—(AP)—The Liberal party under the leadership of former Premier Mackenzie King Monday defeated the Conservative party administration of Premier R. B. Bennett, and on the basis of election returns late Monday night will direct destinies of the new Canadian government.

The Bennett government was removed from office on a wave of anti-administration votes that started in the Maritimes and rolled westward. At 10:45 p. m., the Liberals had won 135 seats of the 245 in the House of Commons, enough to give them a clear majority over all parties.

The Conservatives had only 31, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation two, the Independent Liberals two, and the United Farmers-Laborites only one seat, that in Ontario.

The Triumphant Liberals, in the shades of opposition since 1903, took every seat in Prince Edward Island. They won every seat in Nova Scotia, and took nine of New Brunswick's 10 seats. Into Quebec and Ontario, the Liberals continued their victory march, taking constituency after constituency.

Such an achievement presumably was worth to Mr. Davis, hired by the Edison Electric Institute to test the act, the razing he received in Baltimore federal court when the court crowded laughter at the discovery that Davis had never met his client, Ford Leutenbach, the dentist who owned $2500 of holding company stock, but was hazy both as to the issues and the position of Mr. Davis.

Mystery Clouds Itinerant's Death

Body of Man Found in Local Woods Held at Morgue for Identification

Information leading to the identity of a white man who died late Monday afternoon in Josephine hospital was sought Tuesday by Coroner J. H. Weaver.

The man, aged about 60, was found unconscious in the woods near Guernsey at noon Monday. He was brought to the hospital here but failed to regain consciousness.

There was no mark of violence on the body. Nothing in his clothing pointed toward identification. A bottle of white pills, with no label on the bottle, was found in his clothing.

Coroner Weaver said Tuesday that the pills may be sent to a chemist to be analyzed.

The man was dressed in overalls. He weighed about 160 pounds and the third and fourth toes on his right foot were about half the normal length.

Mrs. Laura Hacker, living on a farm near Shepherd, said that the man appeared at her home early Monday and begged for food. She said the man told her he had two half-brothers living on a farm near Texarkana, but mentioned no names.

He also said that he had two twin daughters living in Joplin, Mo., one of whom married a doctor, the other a night watchman, but again he gave no names.

The body is held at Hope Furniture company morgue pending identification.

U. S. Naval enlistments from the Texarkana area for October so far are as follows:
J. I. Hill and D. F. Williams, Houston; C. O. Watson, Nashville.

The men enlisted in the Navy for four years, and were transferred to the Naval training station at San Diego, Calif. for four months training before being assigned to ships of the fleet.

Two Brothers of Escaped Prisoner Implicated Here

Jack Howard, Negro, Has Apparently Made Good Escape From Courthouse

HEARINGS MONDAY

Mrs. R. F. Rawls Sentenced 2 Years for Forgery—Returned to Memphis

Jack Howard, negro, who walked out of a crowded courtroom at Washington Monday during a short recess of circuit court, apparently had made good his escape Tuesday.

The negro, awaiting trial on a charge of assault with intent to kill, fled into a wooded area north of Washington and successfully eluded officers who combed the woods until nearly midnight.

Sheriff Jim Bearden announced Tuesday that two of Howard's brothers had been arrested and were held in jail for aiding Howard in his escape.

Sheriff Bearden declared he could produce witnesses who he said saw Howard's two brothers call the negro from the prisoner's row talked with him for a few seconds, and then escorted the prisoner through the crowd to liberty.

Hearing Monday

A preliminary hearing for Howard's brothers will be held next Monday at Hope. One of Howard's brothers is named Clem. Sheriff Bearden was unable to recall the other's name. Circuit court adjourned late Monday until January. The result of the one-day session:

Willie Neal, negro, pleaded guilty to assault with intent to kill, and was sentenced to two to 10 years in the reform school. Neal pleaded guilty to the shooting and wounding of Will Garner of Hope, who was acting as a peace officer during a negro dance several months ago.

Mrs. Robert F. Rawls was sentenced to two years on charges of forgery and uttering. The sentences are to run concurrently. After she was sentenced, Mrs. Rawls was turned over to Memphis authorities to answer a charge there.

Woman Acquitted

A circuit court jury returned a verdict of acquittal late Monday in the case of Helen Williams, negro woman charged with killing her husband, James Williams, near DeAnn about a year ago.

The only other jury trial resulted in acquittal for Lula Hood, negro woman, charged with fleeing Mrs. Alice Finley of Guernsey, out of $300 in an alleged confidence game. Nearly all of the money was recovered.

Several prisoners held in jail made bond and their trials were postponed until January.

Baylor President Dismisses Co-eds

Neff, Who Disciplined 3 for Smoking, Drops 3 More Outright

WACO, Texas—(AP)—President Paul M. Neff of Baylor University, who recently disciplined three co-eds for smoking, dismissed three other outright Monday for what he termed "the good of the university" and "unbecoming conduct."

The former governor of Texas—now in his fourth year as head of the Baptist institution—read the young women's names at chapel. They were not present.

The three co-eds are Vera L. Gopin of Waco, sophomore, whom he asked to retire for the "good of the university," and Ennie Lilly Dewitt of Ballinger and Elmer Louise Winger of Moody, indefinitely suspended, he said, for "conduct unbecoming Baylor students."

President Neff did not enlarge upon the reasons for the dismissals. He also read the names of three other students who were assessed five demerits against them for reading newspapers in chapel and climbing over benches in their exit.

Sales This August Increased 22 Per Cent Over August a Year Ago

ST. LOUIS—(AP)—A hundred and eighty million gallons of ice cream—six quarts to every person—were consumed in the United States last year, a convention of the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers reported Monday. August sales in 1935 were 22 per cent higher than a year ago, the delegates said. Vanilla remained the nation's favorite flavor with chocolate a close second.

New York Publisher Reports Being Disarmed in State of Sonora

DOUGLAS, Ariz.—(AP)—Five prominent Americans on a hunting trip in the revolt-menaced Mexican state of Sonora were reported from several sources Tuesday to be safe after their guns and ammunition had been seized by an armed band of Mexican raiders.

Arthur D. Norcross, New York publisher, who returned from the interior Monday, reported the encounter with the rebels.

Last War Bonds Refunded by U. S.

Many of "Liberties" Are Converted Into Interest-Bearing Coupons

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Treasury Monday announced the "successful" completion of its refunding operations, which retire the last of the war-time Liberty loan bonds.

Undersecretary Coolidge reported that preliminary returns disclosed $95,000,000 of the $1,246,000,000 of Liberties which have been called for payments on October 15 had been turned in for conversion into interest-bearing coupons.

47 States Adopt 1,400 New Taxes

Relief of Property From State Levy, Outstanding National Goal

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Every state except Virginia, whose legislature did not meet, was shown Monday to have joined in a game of swatting the taxpayer.

A compilation prepared for the National Tax association by Raymond E. Manning of the Library of Congress, reported that 47 state legislatures enacted 1,400 new tax laws.

He set down 56 of these as new taxes and 65 of them as important rate increases.

Of the new ones, there were seven sales taxes; five personal income, two capital stock, four cigarette, four horse racing, seven oleomargarine, four chair store and two slot machine taxes.

The motivating force behind many of these new and increased taxes was unbalanced budgets, additional relief needs, new federal funds to be matched and a persistent demand for reduced property taxes, he said.

Many of the states are in a reasonably good financial condition. Several

Hauptmann Given a Federal Appeal

Attorney Granted 30-Day Stay of Execution to Perfect Appeal Case

TRENTON, N. J.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution was stayed indefinitely Tuesday when the Court of Errors and Appeals granted him an opportunity to appeal his conviction in the Lindbergh murder-kidnap case to the United States Supreme Court.

The court gave Egbert Rosecrans, lawyer for Hauptmann, 30 days in which to ask the supreme court to review allegations that Hauptmann's constitutional rights were violated in the trial.

PWA Projects to Obtain Insurance

Underwriters Indicate U. S. Jobs Only Will Be Accepted in Clark Co.

LITTLE ROCK.—Although officially turning "thumbs down" on writing liability insurance for contractors on Clark county projects until conditions blamed for excessive personal injury verdicts are altered, members of the Arkansas Casualty & Surety Underwriters Association late Monday privately left the door open for $347,000 in PWA projects, threatened by inability of contractors to obtain insurance required by the government.

"Rather than see the county lose these projects because of the condition that has existed there, I will urge my company to underwrite all three of them," one agent said. "However, we will never do business there again until something of a permanent nature is done to clear this situation up."

One agent said that none of the companies in the state would be afraid to underwrite the PWA projects in view of the public attention attracted to them recently.

The projects involve $30,000 for a city hall at Arkadelphia, $263,000 for construction and equipment at Henderson State Teachers College and $55,000 for a waterworks at Amity. J. P. Womack, president of the college, is among those who have written the surety companies urging that they underwrite the projects.

4,310 Bales Ginned Here to October 1

Hempstead county cotton ginnings up to October 1 were 4,310 bales, against 10,061 bales for the same period a year ago, according to W. H. Etter of Washington, reporter for the U. S. Bureau of the Census.

Development of the two-row radial engine as a power plant for airplanes goes back to the period before the World war.

50 Nations of the League Back Embargo Move Against Italians

PLANES ARE ACTIVE

Unconfirmed Rumor Reports Ethiopian Thrust at Eritrea

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Declaring that "the obsolete and blood-stained instrument" of war cannot cure the world's economic ills, Secretary of State Hull advocated Tuesday a three-fold international effort for peace and prosperity.

He called for the simultaneous action of many countries for the vigorous rebuilding of foreign trade, gradual restoration of monetary stability, and an international agreement upon an organization the principles of which will assure that all important raw materials shall become available on reasonable terms when needed.

League Orders Embargo

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—The League of Nations subcommittee for economic sanctions decided, in principle Tuesday, to recommend an embargo against shipment into Italy of "key" products—materials used in the manufacture of war munitions.

The committee then proceeded to draw up a specific list of products which Premier Mussolini must have if he continues the manufacture of armaments and supplies for his forces in East Africa.

The list included zinc, copper, nickel, tin, coal, wool, manganese and gasoline.

Rumors of Ethiopian Thrust

DJIBOUTI, French Somaliland.—(Havas, French, News Agency)—Ethiopian troops penetrated Tuesday into a section of the Italian colony of Eritrea, north of French Somaliland, cutting off several thousand Italian troops from their base.

(The Havas report, it should be noted, comes from neutral territory and not the actual war front. It should be qualified pending later confirmation.)

Aksum Formally Occupied

ROME, Italy.—(AP)—The Italian army formally occupied the Ethiopian holy city of Aksum Tuesday.

General Emilio De Bono's army entered the city at 7:15 Tuesday morning, an official communication announced.

The news was heralded as "a victory for the Italian cause" not even second to that of Adowa.

By the Associated Press

Italian airplanes flew over Harrar and Diredda (overnight railroad stop), both strategic Ethiopian points, Tuesday—when further war bombing planes dispersed troops with explosives near Makale, next objective in the Italian drive from Adowa.

Great Britain's navy engaged in maneuvers at Alexandria, Egypt, where a formidable fleet is concentrated. Hordes of Emperor Scassie's black warriors marched barefoot to the southern front for an engagement with the Italian Somaliland troops which may be the first major battle of the war.

Must Talk to League

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Any proposals for Italy-Ethiopian peace desired by Mussolini must be submitted to the League of Nations, it was declared in authoritative quarters Tuesday.

This expression of the British viewpoint dismissed reports that Monday's conference between Premier Laval, of France, and Sir George Russell Clark, British ambassador to Paris, was in regard to Mussolini's peace proposals.

50 Nations Veto Boycott

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—Financial sanctions designed to strangle Italy in money matters and force Premier Mussolini to halt his war in Ethiopia were approved Monday night by 50 nations. Tuesday an offensive on the economic front will begin. Despite reservations and explanations from some countries, events moved swiftly.

At the close of one of the most hectic days Geneva has seen since the beginning of the war in Africa, Anthony Eden of Great Britain informed the League that Britain has lifted an arms embargo against Ethiopia. He created the impression that sending weapons to Ethiopia has begun in considerable proportions.

Eden announced that Britain's embargo of arms to Italy would be maintained. These steps were the first recommended by the League when it began to apply sanctions.

The summary of the financial blockade program calls upon League states to make the following transactions impossible:

All direct and indirect loans, subscriptions to loans, bankers' or other credits, issues of shares or other appeals for money for the purpose of obtaining funds for the Italian government or for Italian public bodies

Confusion of Ideas On Feeling of Falling.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Exact Promise Is Poor Training.

When you have a feeling you're falling, what do you think about? You may be acquainted with the saying that a whole life passes before a person during his drop from a height. Well, how would you reconcile that with the other belief that a person, who is falling from a height, loses consciousness after he has dropped about 100 feet or the idea that death occurs before the ground is reached?

Sometimes a girl, jumping from a window in a high building in Chicago and happened to land on a wagon that was loaded with empty paper boxes. She wasn't killed. When reporters tried to get from her an account of any impressions she had when she fell, she couldn't remember a thing.

Recently it occurred to Harry G. Armstrong of the U. S. Army Medical Corps to make an actual test and get first-hand the sensations that pass before the mind of a person who falls from a height.

He went up in an airplane to a height of 2000 feet, and while the plane was flying at a speed of 119 miles an hour, he jumped. He made careful note of his mental and physical reactions and sensations until he reached a height of about 1000 feet, before he pulled the rip cord of his parachute.

In his report, Captain Armstrong points out that his two main mental factors were fear and excitement. The fear was associated not only with the instinctive fear of falling but also with the fear that the parachute might catch on the airplane or that the parachute might be defective.

The excitement was natural. As he stood on the airplane ready to jump, he was impressed with the ground below, the roar of the wind past his head.

After he jumped he was quite conscious of everything that was going on. He did not, however, hear anything after the jump, probably due to the rush of air past the ears.

He was able to see the ground and the airplanes above him. He was not dizzy and he had no feeling of fainting or any of that empty feeling which one feels when dropping suddenly in an elevator. His breathing was not disturbed.

The only abnormal sensation he felt was the pressure on the body from the air as he fell. He was quite able to realize his position in space and to realize that his body was turning over as he fell.

This actual experience should serve to clear up many of the notions which persist relative to what a human being feels when he falls.

Here's an Excellent Book About Health

An essential item in the furnishings of the old homestead used to be the family medical adviser—a ponderous and musty tome which sat on the parlor table along with the family Bible, and which told its pioneer owners how to treat everything from chilblains to malaria.

An up-to-date successor to this book is now available—a complete, authoritative book which compares with its predecessor as the Mayo clinic compares with the backwoods horse doctor of 1880. It is entitled "Modern Home Medical Advisor," and it has been edited and compiled by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, in collaboration with 23 distinguished physicians.

"This volume," writes Dr. Fishbein in his preface, "is planned to tell you in a modern manner what every intelligent person ought to know about scientific medicine and hygiene, and to answer questions concerning all the common and even some of the extraordinary illnesses that may develop in any family."

In plain, non-technical language, the book discusses hygiene and first aid, prenatal care and the care of infants, diet—and this section in particular is full of refreshing common sense—the symptoms, causes, and manner of at-

The Golden Feather by Robert Bruce © 1935 NEA Service, Inc.

JEAN DUNN, pretty, 21, is secretary to DONALD MONTAGUE, lawyer. BOBBY WALLACE, automobile salesman, has frequently asked her to marry him, but Jean delays her answer.

At the Golden Feather night club she meets LARRY HARKINS, long a friend of Jean and Bobby, who is trying to trail WINGIE LEWIS, bank robber. He confides details of the case to his friend, MIKE HAGAN, of the local police force. Jean and Bobby go to the Golden Feather again and see Sandy there with MR. and MRS. LEWIS. They all go to the Lewis' apartment. Lewis tells Bobby he wants to buy a car, a special job worth $10,000. He shows Bobby some bonds worth $10,000 and says if Bobby can sell them for him he will buy the car and Bobby will have $2000 profit.

Bobby attempts to sell them to Jean's employer.

Hagan suspects Sandy Harkins of being involved in a payroll robbery. Sandy is tipped off that police are looking for him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XII

JEAN DUNN looked up from her typewriter with a start to see Sandy Harkins standing beside her desk, grinning at her.

"Why—where'd you come from?" she asked. He jerked his thumb at her employer's private office.

"In there," he said.

"In there?" she asked blankly.

"Why not? Him and I had some business. I got things all framed up—your and me to go horseback riding."

"Sandy, what are you talking about?"

"Well, if you don't believe it, ask him. Here he comes."

The door opened, and Mr. Montague came over to them.

"I understand you already know Mr. Harkins," he said, with one hand on Sandy's arm. Jean nodded, smiling.

"Mr. Harkins is a client of mine," said Mr. Montague.

"Now you know a lawyer exists to serve his clients; and this particular client demands that I permit my stenographer to leave her work in the middle of the morning and go out horseback riding with him."

JEAN gaped at him. His eyes twinkled gaily as he went on:

"And the funny part of it is, I'm going to grant his request. I might lose him if I didn't. And I can't afford to do that, you know. Can't let a good client get away from you. So you're at his disposal, Miss Dunn, until—well, until tomorrow morning. As far as I'm concerned, anyway."

She still looked up, incredulous.

"No, I mean it," said Mr. Montague. "Get your hat and get out of here. I don't want to see you until tomorrow."

And he turned and went back into his office. Jean looked up at Sandy.

"Will you tell me what on earth this is all about?"

"Come on—you heard him, didn't you? Get your hat and we'll go places."

HE pulled her to her feet, laughing, but feeling that a day off was a day off even when you couldn't understand it. Jean hurried off to make herself ready. Five minutes later she was sitting beside Sandy in his roadster.

"I expect you'll want to get your riding clothes on?" he asked. She nodded, and he turned off to the boulevard to go to her apartment.

To all her questions he returned joking answers, refusing to say more than that, as Mr. Montague's client, he had demanded and obtained the company of Mr. Montague's stenographer for a day in the country.

He waited in the car while Jean went into her apartment and changed her clothes. Then they were off again, and before long they had reached the riding academy and were mounted.

They had been here several times. After that canoe trip, Jean had found herself forgetting her scruples against having dates with this tall westerner.

They cantered across a field and came out in a leafy country road, where they reined their horses in to a walk. Jean threw her head back, looked up at the blue summer sky, and luxuriated in the feel of the wind on her bare throat.

"You know, I've got it pretty good," she said. "Have I got almost a whole day off, and last week one day Mr. Montague let me go home in the middle of the afternoon—"

"I'm the lucky one," said Sandy. "I got a date out of it, each time."

"Well, it's pretty soft," said Jean contentedly. "It's funny about Mr. Montague. I haven't hardly been earning my salary lately. . . . What day was that, anyhow?"

"Friday," said Sandy promptly. "I remember because that was Eve Lewis's birthday. She bawled me out for not remembering to be home for her dinner party."

"Why Sandy—did you break an engagement to go canoeing with me?" asked Jean.

"Say, I'm glad I did—for more reasons than one."

JEAN eyed him archly. "What's the other one?"

SANDY sighed. "Aw, there's a funny mix-up here in town. Seems there's a holdup artist some, where around who looks like me."

"Sandy!"

"How can you imagine?" she asked, puzzled. "How did you find out about it?"

"Art Lanning, down at the Golden Feather, told me. This holdup artist has a description of this holdup man, and a couple of 'em were in the Golden Feather the other night and saw me. So they went home and talked it over and decided that since I looked like the bird they'd better pick me up. The word got out, some way, and Art heard about it and told me."

He looked over with an expression of mock dismay.

"You mean—you mean they—they want to arrest you?"

"Yeah."

He took out a cigaret and lit it, apparently supremely unconcerned.

"But Sandy! What are you going to do?"

He laughed.

"Well, as soon as this ride is finished, I'm going down to police headquarters and explain the mistake and ask them to stop worrying about me," he said lightly.

"Are you sure they—they'll believe you?"

Once more he laughed confidently.

"I know they will."

"How?"

"Because," he said, half-turning in his saddle to look at her, "at the moment that this particular robbery was being committed, out on the east side of town, you and I were in a canoe 15 miles away, paddling along the river."

His eyes rested on hers, and she felt a weight disappear from her chest.

"Oh, Sandy—really?"

"Sure. That's why I said I was glad in more ways than one that you got the afternoon off last Friday. If you hadn't I'd probably have had the devil's own time trying to persuade these coppers I'm an honest man. This way it's perfectly simple. All we've got to do is go down there and explain about last Friday afternoon, and everything'll be settled. But if I hadn't been with you it all might have been pretty unpleasant before I got things straightened out."

JEAN stared at him, somewhat startled.

"I've," she said.

It was his turn to look surprised.

"Why, of course. You'll go in with me, won't you? Being more or less of a stranger here, I might have trouble getting them to take my word for it, but with you along—"

HE gestured airily with his cigar. Jean told herself that it was silly to feel any reluctance toward going to the police station with him.

"Oh, of course I'll go," she said. "It's just that—oh, I suppose it's just because I've never been in a police station, and I always sort of imagined them as dirty and messy, and—"

He laughed.

"Won't take five minutes," he said. "And there's no hurry about it. We'll finish our ride and have some lunch first. Okay?"

She nodded, and in a sudden mood of gaiety spurred her horse down the road. He was after her instantly, and they finally returned to the barn flushed and breathless, their hair and clothing whipped away by the wind, their spirits exuberant.

Sandy seemed to be in no hurry, and he seemed also to be anxious that the trip to police headquarters should not be too oppressive a prospect to her. He took her to a suburban inn for lunch, and they sat for a long time on a breeze-washed veranda while Sandy talked about nothing at all in his half-mocking, half-affectionate manner. At last, glancing at his watch, he suggested that they "get it over with."

Three quarters of an hour later he found a parking place near the gloomy police headquarters and led Jean up the worn steps. She followed him across a musty hall into a dilapidated elevator, which creaked and wheezed its way to the third floor. Then they went down an even mustier hall to a door which bore a sign, "Detective Bureau." Rather timidly she followed Sandy into what seemed to be a waiting room, where half a dozen people sat about on plain wooden benches.

Sandy led her toward a bench at the side of the room. Two men were sitting there, and one of them got up and smiled as they approached. To Jean's amazement, it was Mr. Montague.

"Well, Miss Dunn," he said, smiling, "I understand you're going to be the heroine that helps Sandy out of this absurd predicament he seems to be in?"

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Right Coiffure Can Be Brushed Out for Business Wear

This season, the smart young business woman who wants to look like a glamorous, silken creature in the evening and still stay within her beauty budget can have an exotic formal coiffure which, when combed out, looks equally as well the next day in the office.

After all, she seldom can afford more than one visit a week to the beauty shop and the hairdresser who understands how to make waves, curls and swirls that are flattering, whether loose or tight, is the one for her.

To go with a dramatic, Renaissance gown, short hair can be swirled across the back of the head and parted rather low on the right side. This side may be arranged in curls or four rather doughnut-shaped curls. The left will show several.

With this type, there is no need for finger waves. The top can be finished with one or two curls to match the sides. Next day, the hair can be combed in the usual manner and the curls brushed back into place. Later in the week, mere fluffiness where curls used to be will be attractive.

With Greek gowns, halo braids are especially suitable for business women. You can pile your hair upward from the back and wrap the braid around your head just for the night. If your hairdresser arranges a Grecian hair style without the halo braid, ask him to wave the back of your hair as carefully as he does the front and sides. Then when you comb your hair down instead of up for work the next day, it won't appear to be something left over from the party the night before.

Remember, of course, that the tonics you use at home and the amount of brushing you do always are important, whether you visit a salon once a week or several times more than that. You simply can't expect a coiffure expert to be able to do his best with unhealthily hair that is stringy, dull and lifeless. Do your part and his work will please you a good deal more.

or for persons and corporations in Italian territory.

The day disclosed formidable difficulties and perhaps delays in organizing a world-wide economic and financial boycott against a warring nation, already well supplied with munitions. The League disapproved that member states have constitutions which cannot be ignored.

Struggle for Ogaden

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, (AP)—Military observers predicted the first battle of the war in the desert of Ogaden would not be long delayed.

They foresaw an early clash between an Ethiopian army of 100,000 under Ras Desta Dantu, Emperor Haile Selassie's son-in-law, and an Italian force led by Gen. Rodolfo Graziani in the Southeast.

Advancing along the protective border of British Somaliland, this Italian army was headed toward the rich Harar area, "Garden of Ethiopia," on the route to the heart of the African empire.

A flank attack on the left wing of the Fascist columns was anticipated from the Somali order of Ras Desta, who, Ethiopians say, outnumbered the Italians by 15 to 1.

The Ethiopian plane, planning to join forces with the 60,000 men of a Boer colonel who own border areas in Italian Somaliland, was said to have pushed his army in forced marches out of the lowlands of the Webbe Shibli river.

The troops of Graziani, with 200 airplanes and 250 tanks, were declared by Ethiopians to have killed or wounded 10,000 natives in their 30-mile advance. But Ras Desta believed his overwhelming numbers would enable him to turn the Italian flank into the waterless desert region to the southwest.

In the Walwal Wells vicinity, where tribal raids touched off hostilities almost a year ago, unconfirmed reports to Addis Ababa said a strong concentration of Italian troops was trying to push through Ethiopian outposts, with much fighting.

Some Gentleman!

One day there came to a hospital clinic a negro woman with a fractured jaw. The surgeon, intent on discovering the exact nature and extent of the injury, asked numerous questions, to all of which the patient returned evasive answers. Finally she admitted she had been "hit with an object."

"Was it a large object?" asked the physician.

"T'was large."

"Was it moving rapidly or slowly?"

"T'was fast."

Then, her patience exhausted, she blurted out: "To tell you the truth, doctah, Ah was jess natchelly kick in de face by a gentleman friend."—Everybody's Weekly (London).

Cross Crossings Cautiously

TPW

Smith.

Year by year the deadly traffic toll reaches new peaks. In the thick of the battle to reduce this loss of life are state Motor Vehicle Administrators. Twelve of them, officers and members of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, have contributed a series of articles describing the major causes of automobile accidents. Number Ten in the series: "Cross Crossings Cautiously" follows:

By PAUL DOYAL
Chairman, State Revenue Commission, Georgia, Regional Vice-President, American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators

THANKS to improved safety devices and intensive education, automobile accidents at railroad crossings have decreased considerably in recent years. Nevertheless, the railroad crossing is still an important hazard to safe driving. Last year there were more than 5,000 collisions between automobiles and trains. In these 1190 persons were killed and 4770 injured, according to statistics collected by a member company of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

None of this toll is necessary if drivers observe two of the most familiar safety slogans: "Stop, Look, and Listen." and "Cross Crossings Cautiously." This advice is so sensible and so easy to observe that it is difficult to understand how more than 5000 drivers disregarded it in 1934, especially since an accident is almost certain to be fatal. An automobile stands less chance against a train than a pedestrian does against an automobile.

Bridges and underpasses have aided greatly in reducing grade crossing accidents and are the ultimate solution to the problem. In the case of many underpasses, however, one hazard has been substituted for another. That is the underpass which is at, or nearly at, right angles to the road. Such a sharp turn into the narrow underpass usually barely wide enough for two cars, is full of accident possibilities. If a driver encounters another vehicle at such a point, it is absolutely necessary that he be going slowly enough to keep to his side. A collision is the only alternative. Underpass warning signs mean slow down.

Meanwhile, until the grade crossing disappears from the American driving scene, good motorists will continue to stop, look and listen, and to cross crossings cautiously.

When the night grows still, and the vibrant day has folded her curtains down, A spirit moves on the brooding dark With a shining silvery crown; In-hut and hovel the Spirit moves, And palaces of renown. It moves through the haunts of troubled men Where their souls in anguish bow At the throne of God and pray release From a cross too hard to bear; The Presence hovers and lays a crown On each anxious mortal's brow. And fragrance sweet, as a new-blown rose, And as incense fills the air; The fragrance of faith in the souls of men Expressed in a midnight prayer. It says: Wherever the troubled call The Spirit of Peace is there. And we think 'twere well could the sons of men, Seeking their souls' release In a baffling fight with a failed fate, Bid all their conflicts cease, And ask alone for that boon most blest, 'Th' incomparable boon of Peace.—Selected.

Ladies' Night at East 2d St. Arena

One Guest to Be Admitted Free With Each Paid Ticket Thursday

The first ladies' night program to be held at the American Legion arena, East Second street is scheduled for Thursday night, Promoter Bert Mauldin announced Tuesday. With each paid adult admission one woman guest will be admitted free.

The card this week will bring together Scotty McNaught, probably the most scientific grappler to appear here in months, and the "Black Dragon," masked man who has proven to be very unpopular with local fans.

"The match between McNaught and the Dragon is something the fans have been asking for, and I am pleased to bring them together," Promoter Mauldin said.

The Dragon has appeared here twice in consecutive weeks, winning over Barney Conneek and George Ligoosky. McNaught's work here last week against Ralph "Wild Red" Berry proved that he was capable of taking care of himself against the best of light heavyweights. McNaught all but won over Berry, the match finally ending in a draw.

In the feature event this Thursday Bob Montgomery of Hot Springs is matched with "Speedy" Schaffer, a newcomer.

The New Deal

had sent from Washington to oppose him, to ask what business he had in this case, involving reorganization of American States Public Service Co., and to suggest more or less delicately that the whole proceeding was a frameup.

Neither Chief Counsel John J. Burns of SEC nor Thomas Corcoran, for the government, actually cried any opprobrious names at the distinguished Mr. Davis. But the effect was near that, which was what caused Mr. Davis to complain of suggestions which "would have been offensive to the dignity of a police court" and of an "unworthy, undignified, and contemptible presentation."

Lame Aid for Government
The Baltimore case, in which counsel for trustees and Dr. Lautenbach appear to ask Judge Coleman to give an advisory opinion on the act—claiming it will interfere with American States reorganization plans—was carefully picked by the big holding companies and their lawyers.

The government, which was able to appear only as a friend of the court, cannot appeal such an advisory opinion, which would be only for the guidance of trustees.

Appeal presumably would be up to the lawyer representing another of American States securities, who undertook to argue the constitutionality of the act and was at one time told by Coleman (commonly regarded here as an anti-New Deal judge) that he was arguing "in circles."

Government worries as to such appeal were indicated when Burns openly questioned the good faith of his lawyer and his clients. The transcript shows, after the lawyer had admitted reluctantly changing his mind as to the act's constitutionality:

Burns: "What were the factors which you now recollect as effecting your change of mind?"

Witness: "I don't know."

Mess Is Forecast

Government lawyers, wishing they had a more brilliant and earnest champion than that, nevertheless figure they could persuade the supreme court to throw out the case on their claim of "collusion."

In event of appeal, they can again appear as "friends of the court." But the status of the holding company act is likely to become rather messy, in the popular mind at least, especially since the advisory opinion may not be given until shortly before December 1.

Meanwhile, the question is raised—inferentially by lawyers themselves—whether the legal process is any sweeter and cleaner than the legislative process.

eral were content to go along with their existing systems while others sought to make their positions more secure. Certain other states, whose financial conditions were unfavorable attempted to improve matters while still others failed to do anything about it.

Manning's study showed that in reaching out for revenue, the states had sought out virtually every imaginable avenue. He said gross income or sales taxes were now on the books in 24 states; alcoholic beverage levies in 26; oleomargarine, 23; cigarette, 19; horse racing, 25; inheritance, 47 (all save Nevada); gifts, three; personal income, 30; corporation income, 30; national banks, according to their income, 10; chain stores, 10.

Georgia and Nevada decided to submit to referendum proposals to limit property rates. Seven states have such tax limitations.

In addition to limiting the rates it might impose on property, Georgia's referendum, if adopted, would put in the area that has hauled all state taxes on property. These are: Rhode Island, California, Delaware, Illinois, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Virginia and Wisconsin.

WITH THE LADIES

By Helen Welshimer

Society—the great mass of men and women—simply won't ask wearers of a scarlet letter to Sunday dinner. Say what you please, argue this way and that for the intelligence of the human world, you will still find Hester Prynne waiting in the church vestibule.

Man's inhumanity to man? Certainly. But since it is that way, it takes a surpassing love and a great bravery for a woman to love with exceeding sacrifice. Not you or I or anyone dare say whether she loves wisely or too well.

Ellen Glasgow, in her thoroughly beautiful and intelligent novel, "Vein of Iron," has given such a problem to the girl who is her story's protagonist, Ada Fincastle. The subjects of personal chastity and illegal love are being revived among many women whose clubs have put down the book for reviews.

A Pawn of Fate Rebels

Ada had a single heart—or vein of iron—which is the desire to live, not only as men measure time on a cosmic calendar but as the emotions run the range of seasons. After all, anyone may have a repository of moments that are merely moments. It is the occasional peak beyond the clouds that justifies the monotony of long thoroughfares. If hearts find their dreams in peculiar places we can not judge.

But to get back to Ada. When Ralph McBride, whom she loves and who loves her, is caught in the web that an unscrupulous girl weaves, a lot of people, attempting to assume the dictatorship, insist that Ralph marry the girl. Ralph is innocent. The lesser gods admit that later and are sorry, but their bungling has ruined two perfectly good lives by then. Therefore, when Ralph is going to France to war, he and Ada spend a few hours in a cabin that stands near a stream, within a screen of sycamores.

Ada bore Ralph's child while he was at war. She bore, too, the taunts of the villagers who capitalized her scarlet letter as society did long before that day that men cast stones at a woman on a Galilean road.

New Instrument Sees Farther Than Ever—But the Stars Are Endless

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE Associated Press Science Editor NEW HAVEN, Ct.—(AP)—A major discovery of the world's largest telescope, that 500,000,000 light years away, there is not one sign of a void in any direction, was described Monday night at Yale University by Dr. Edwin P. Hubble, of Mt. Wilson Observatory.

This entire space is filled with nebulae, numbering 100,000,000, mostly clouds of stars traveling like bees swarming in flight. In these far off swarms the telescope detects iron, hydrogen and calcium, the same substances familiar on earth.

It detects nothing whatever to forecast how much farther man must see to find any frontier of creation, or even to find anything startlingly different.

"The observable region of space," Dr. Hubble said, "is a vast sphere perhaps 1,000,000,000 light years in diameter. Throughout the sphere are scattered 100,000,000 nebulae—stellar systems—in various stages of their evolutionary history.

"The nebulae are distributed singly, in groups, and occasionally in great clusters, but when large volumes of space are compared, the tendency to cluster averages out. To the very limits of the telescope the large-scale distribution of the nebulae is approximately uniform.

"They are scattered at average intervals of the order of 2,000,000 light years, or perhaps 200 times their mean diameters. The pattern might be represented by tennis balls, 50 feet apart."

The average light from one of these nebulae is equal to 85,000,000 suns. This means that 85,000,000 stars the size of our own sun could give the light seen from a nebulae, although its stars are almost certainly of varying sizes, so that 85,000,000 is not necessarily a close count of the stars in a nebulae.

ness which finds its balance and preserves it as the ages run.

If the great mass of people would stop interfering with other people's lives in such crass fashion there would not be the need for such suffering as befell Hester Prynne and Ada Fincastle, after all.

Families on Relief Drop 3 1/2 Per Cent

September Shows Gain in U. S. Retrenchment Program Since August

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A new reported decline in the urban relief population coincided Monday with government efforts to find private jobs for the unemployed.

Aubrey Williams, acting relief administrator, announced that the number of families and single persons on the dole in 142 cities was 3.4 per cent smaller in September than in August.

Total cases were 1,912,832 in August and 1,848,475 in September. There was a 13.3 drop in expenditures, the September dole costing $52,493,301, compared with the August figure of $60,526,287.

Seeking to explain why the long-delayed works program had not brought a larger drop in the relief population, Williams said:

"While it is known that approximately half of the reported decline in cases is due to the expansion of the new works program, it must be kept in mind that the full effect of the transfers from the relief rolls to the works program does not become statistically evident until at least one month after the transfer and in many instances two months."

H. V. Drees, Staff Cameraman for NEA, on Ethiopian Front

Military secrecy is maintained about the bomb-proof dugout being built on the outskirts of Addis Ababa. Above a soldier warns away a native who has strayed into the construction area. In the background is an aerial mast of the radio station that links Ethiopia with civilization.

The Ethiopian Air Force consists of a single plane that is in fighting trim. Here J. Robinson, the American negro aviator, is pictured behind the machine gun mounted in the observer's cockpit. He faces an aerial version of Horatio at the bridge in the event Italy's roaring squadrons attack.

Ethiopian's women are ready to fight, too. A veteran of the battle of Adowa, where the Italians were defeated in 1896, 60-year-old Fernelekha has asked Emperor Haile Selassie for a gun with which to fight again. Her hand and eye are as steady in handling a pistol as at Adowa, where she claims to have killed 50 enemies.

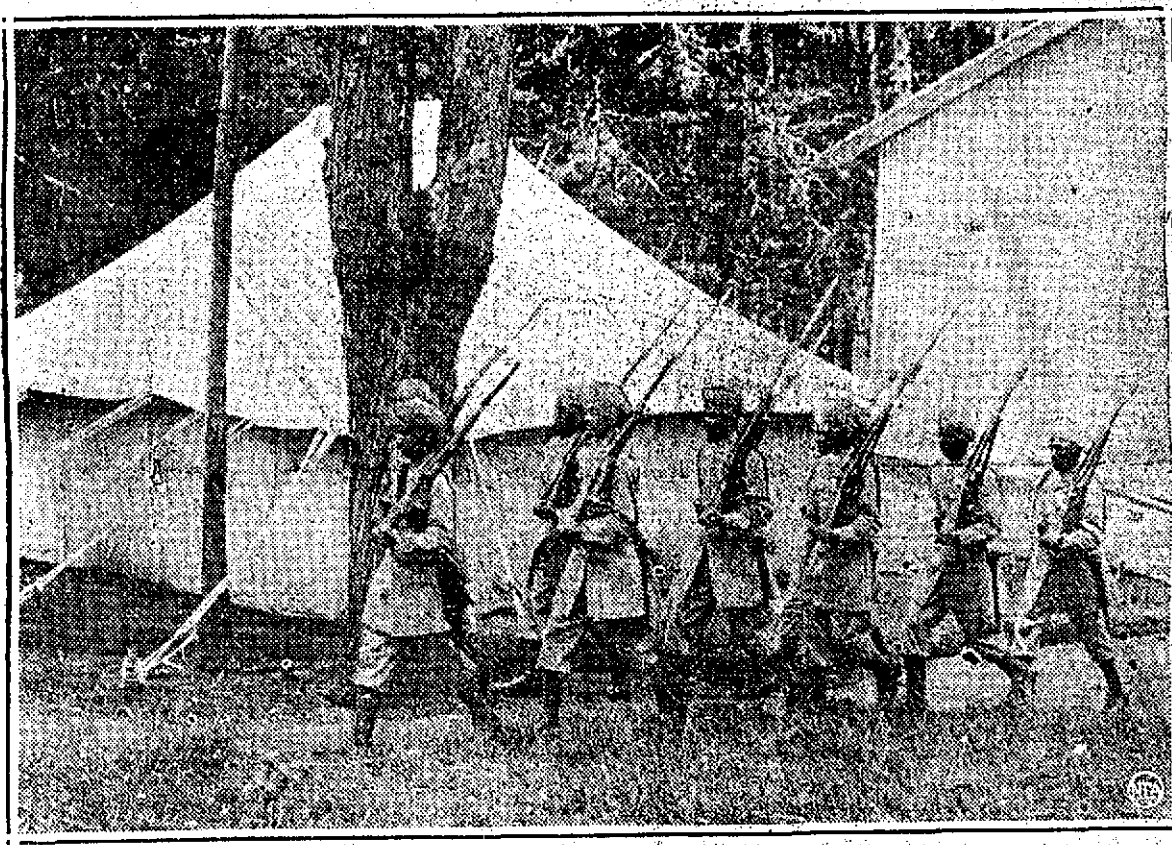

Fear of air raids and shelling by enemy artillery motivates Ethiopian war preparations near Addis Ababa, pictured by H. V. Drees, NEA Service staff photographer. A European engineer is pictured leaning over the parapet of a trench to direct a native working on a bomb-proof dugout to shelter thousands.

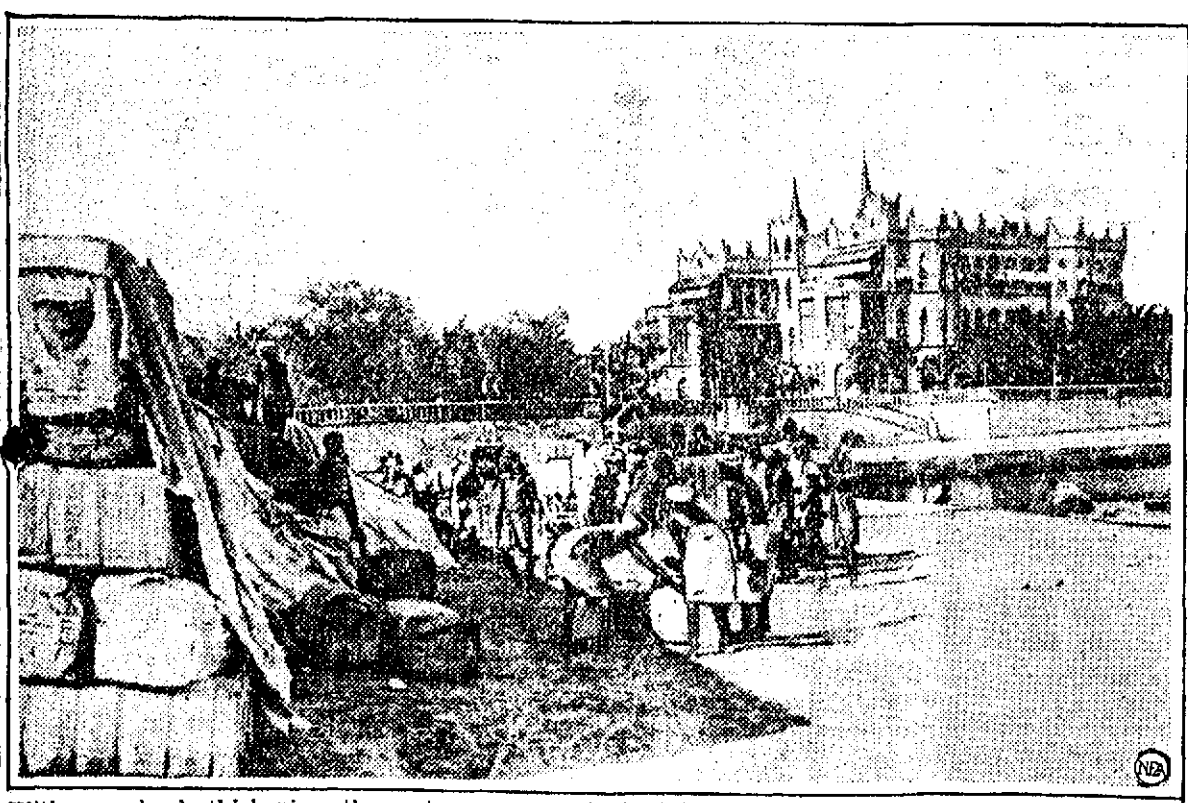

Armed with ancient rifles, muskets and awesome sabers, the savage tribesmen of Ethiopia's interior comprise the most unpredictable factor in the showing their country make against Italy's modern armies. They trot towards the front led by tribal chiefs mounted on donkeys.

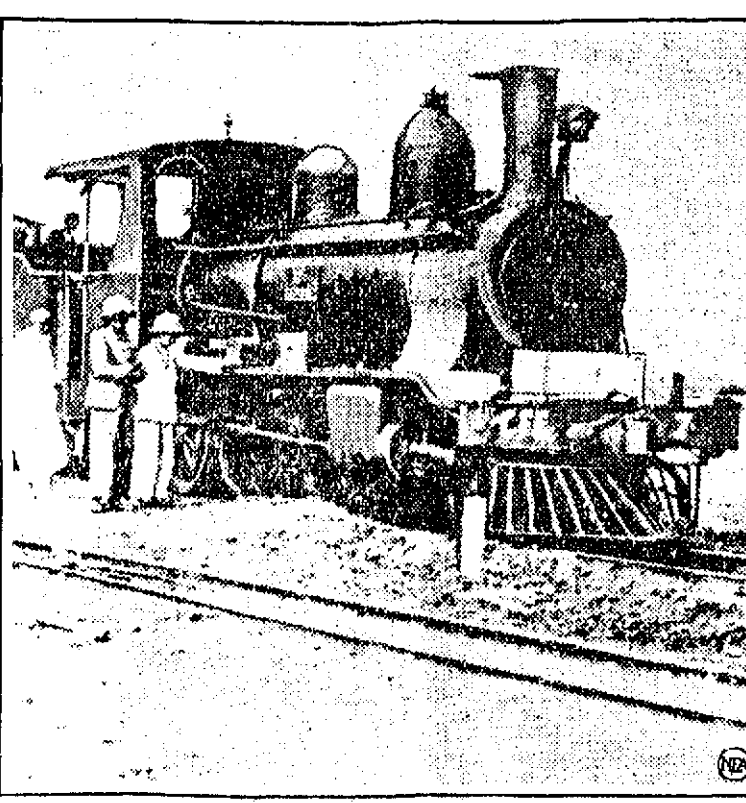

The bright gleam of shining wood and ominous blue steel holds the interest of these Ethiopian troops as they examine the new automatic rifle presented them by Emperor Haile Selassie.

Brought secretly to Addis Ababa from India to defend the British Legation, it was feared at first that the arrival of the Sikh guards might cause alarm. This first picture permitted to be made of them, was taken as they paraded before their tents on the legation grounds prior to going on duty.

With war clouds thickening, the customs quay at Djibuti is a hive of activity, with huge consignments of goods being rushed through the French colony's capital to Ethiopia. Here is shown a section of the wharf with natives busily engaged in unloading a shipment of freight. In the background stands the governor's palace.

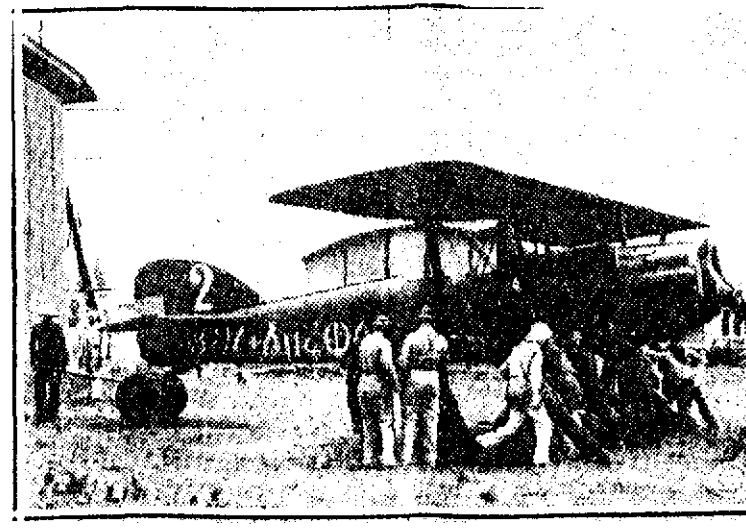

Motive power on the Djibuti-Addis Ababa railway line is of the 50 years ago type. Here is shown one of the ramshackle locomotives that puff over the route, before it started on its run from the Somaliland seaport.

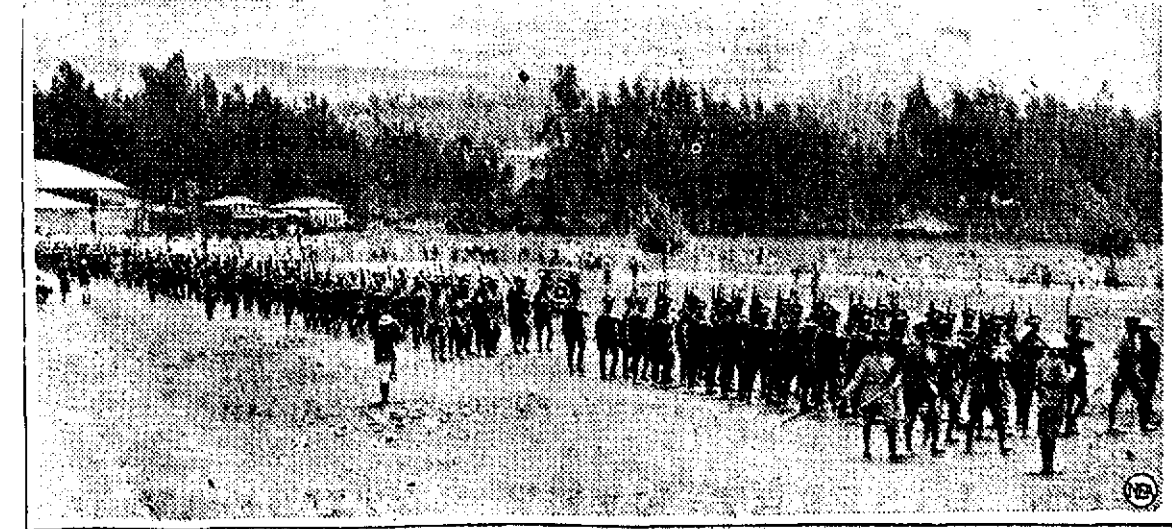

Its railroad damaged badly by heavy summer rains, Ethiopia has rushed many troops to points along the line to aid in repair work. Here is shown a work train loaded with roadbed materials and carrying troops as it proceeds between Duanle and Diradawa. In the background are towering mountains frowning down on the barren plain.

Center of the business district of Djibuti is Menelik place, a section of which is shown here, arched windows and doors of an ancient style of architecture predominating in the low buildings. From this city of 10,000 in French Somaliland runs the only railway line to Ethiopia, carrying most of the goods that enter and are shipped from Addis Ababa.

With only one plane in fighting trim, the arrival of this new two-seater plane at Addis Ababa brought joy to Ethiopia's air force. Mechanics are shown wheeling the craft out of its hangar for the test flight. Antiquated planes are used to fly munitions to the front.

Pride of Emperor Haile Selassie's armies, the Imperial Guard here is shown in a great parade near Addis Ababa before leaving for the Ogaden front to face the Italian invaders. Throngs of natives watched the crack regiment as it marched by in the valley, behind which wooded slopes rose to meet the bare mountains far in the background.

Mrs. Bauer Takes Stand in Chicago's Mutilation-Murder Trial

CHICAGO.—(AP)—Comely Louise Bauer's dramatic story of how she spurned Mandeville W. Zenge brought the state's mutilation murder case against the young Missourian to a close Monday.

The young widow of Dr. Walter J. Bauer, the man Zenge is accused of emulating because he won Louise for a bride, burst into tears as she ended her account of the 10-year romance that allegedly brought death to her husband and a threat of execution to her ex-suitor.

After she had concluded her testimony, unchallenged by the defense, N. Lee Dunham, Maywood (Mo.) school teacher who was the final prosecution witness, testified that after Louise's marriage to Dr. Bauer, Zenge said:

"I could kill that doctor."

The young woman faced the crowd-

The government has asked the tribunal to set aside a decision of the Boston Circuit Court of Appeals which held invalid the processing taxes imposed to finance benefit payments to farmers participating in crop adjustment programs. Receivers for the Housac Mills Corporation of New Bedford, Mass., had contested payment of the tax.

In the TVA case, the government was victor in the New Orleans Circuit Court of Appeals, which upheld its right to acquire power lines through which TVA proposed to sell electricity to municipalities.

Minority stockholders of the Alabama Power Company have asked the Supreme Court to reverse the opinion. An Alabama federal court had held that provisions of the act permitting the power line purchase were unconstitutional in that TVA was threatening to engage in illegal and destructive competition with private industry.

Bridges, Cochrane, Goose Goslin Apply Pressure in Pinches

DETROIT.—Money ball players are not designated without reason.

When the 1935 world series started, three athletes were placed in that category. Their names are Leon Allen, Goslin, Tom Davis Bridges, and Gordon Stanley Cochrane, all of the Detroit Tigers.

The well-oiled Charley Gehring and hammering Hank Greenberg of the same club were taken into consideration. So were the lean Lon Warneke, Gabby Hartnett, and Freddie Lindstrom of the Chicago Cubs but none of these men in knickerbockers had the reputation of being able to put on the pressure in pinches.

Money ball players are so called because when there is something at stake, or when they are in a spot where, if they come through, their outfit prevails, and if they fail their club loses, they usually deliver.

Goose Goslin, Tommy Bridges, and Mickey Cochrane are of that type. Eddie Collins of the old Athletics and White Sox, and Frankie Frisch, a more recent fame, are striking examples of money ball players, especially to those in the profession.

"When the line forms at the counting house, Goslin, Bridges, and Cochrane will be at its head," predicted close observers before the world series.

Their uncanny knack of standing up in the clutch means to their aggregation an individual difference of $2,49.16.

Flings Fellow Golden Goose.

Somewhere you felt that Goslin was going to hit solidly to right center and chase Cochrane home with the winning run in the sixth and final game of the world series. Charley Grimm, pilot of the Cubs, said that the percentage was with Larry French, a southpaw facing a left-handed hitter. But percentage means nothing to the Golden Goose when the chips are down.

There was that third game in Chicago in which Goslin drove a Joe White and Gehring with the tying runs and Big Bill Lee to the showers in the eighth, and then scored himself, making it possible for the Tigers to cop the key game of the set in the 11th. Goslin doubled in the 10th, too, but his mates failed him as he stood on second base, crying to score the winning run.

Pennants follow the Golden Goose and, win or lose, the distinctive veteran from the Jersey lowlands has been a prominent figure as his nose and waddle are in his general makeup.

Goslin has been in five world series. Thirty-five on Oct. 16, the Golden Goose twice was shunted away by Washington as a bit washed up.

Clark Griffith took him back once, probably wishes he had him back again. Goslin helped bat Washington to its first two flags and returned in 1933 to help the Senators to another. From Detroit, he helped take the Tigers to their first pennant in 25 years, aided them in repeating, and wound up batting them to their first world championship in modern baseball.

Bridges Turns on Juice.

Tommy Bridges, 155 pounds of pluck, was the fellow the Cubs had to beat from the outset, and they couldn't do it. The Gordonsville Guide let the Cubs down with six scattered hits to win as he played in the second skirmish, but really rose to his peak in the closing contest after Stanley Hack tripled over Gerald Walker's head to put the potential winning run in easy scoring position in the ninth.

Bridges had to keep the next two men from hitting the ball out of the infield. The third man did, but it was too late. There's the rub. The pinch had come, and Bridges had simply turned on the juice.

Like Goslin, Cochrane has been in five world series, and his clubs have been successful in three.

The majority believed that when Warneke so handily shut out the Tigers in the first game of the 1935 world series that the Detroit club was on its way to another defeat in the fall fashion show.

But Cochrane broke the ice by taking the issue in his own hands in the second engagement and driving in White from first base with a double in the first inning that was the beginning of the quick finish of Charley Root.

It was Cochrane who, after so admirably directing his club and so ably handling what up until his regime was an ordinary pitching staff, scored the first and the last and winning run for Detroit in the ninth. And an honest hit put him on base on each occasion.

Cifhand, I can't recall another manager who had the thrill of denting the rubber with the telly that actually won a world championship for himself as well as his ball club. Certainly, no other manager has enjoyed the pulse-quickenng sensation of performing the feat in the ninth inning. Goslin, Bridges, and Cochrane! Say it again.

Gerald Thompson Dies in Electric Chair Mumbling About Religion

JOILET, Ill.—(AP)—Gerald Thompson, who embraced the Roman Catholic religion in the last few days of his life, was executed in the electric chair Tuesday for the lust murder of Mildred Hallmark, 19, of Peoria.

As one of his last acts he issued a strange, rambling statement, declaring himself ready to die and urging all to turn to religion for solace and guidance.

Among the witnesses at the execution was John Hallmark, father of the girl.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.
